

Finals of the English debating contest: And the winners are...

...the 2nde L2 team, coached by Madame Roig! On Friday 20th May 2018, Florence Nitschmann, Rebecca Pelster and Cleo Loutzoglou argued against the motion according to which online matchmaking was a better system than traditional dating.

And a challenging task it was, when faced with talented opponents. Indeed the 2nde ES team, made of Alina D'Almeida, Cedric Henke and Carolina Köhler Estrada, gave them a hard time with arguments ranging from scientific evidence of successful matchmaking to the importance of common interests in relationships.

Carrie Ankerstein from the University of Saarland, Agnes Scholtes from the Deutsch-Amerikanisches Institut and our very own M. Grannec, spent a few minutes pondering their decision, but the trophee ended up in the proud hands of the three talented young ladies.

Well done to both teams who performed extremely well. Many thanks to the competent and dedicated jury members, as well as to Alfa for sponsoring the prize.

See you next year!
